THE OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE BELTED GALLOWAY SOCIETY, INC.

Maryland—The Old Line State

President Jon Bednarski

Our recent visit to Maryland was prompted by the Advertising and Promotion Committee selecting Bill and May-Lyn Adams' photo of their children as the winner of the Society's 2014 "Kids with their Cows" calendar contest. I felt Sylvia and I should pay the family a visit.

Maryland currently has 35 registered/recorded Belted Galloway cattle and 10 member farms. Interestingly, the state's "Old Line" nickname in the title above, was from the American Revolution. It referred to the mobilization of the state's first men to the battle lines.

We arrived in rural Fredrick, Maryland and were met by the Adams' four children: Emma, 11, Megan, 9; Olivia, 6; William, 4; and the family dog. Bill Adams, an endodontist, became interested in agriculture when he worked on a farm during the summer months of his youth. Bill's family had farmed in previous generations. He and May-Lyn wanted to introduce their children to farming and as much of a rural lifestyle as possible. In 2011, they purchased 25 acres of fallow land a few miles from their home. The following year, they bought 13 Belted Galloway cattle from Floodwoods Farm (VT). But first, a lot of work was done to prepare for the cattle. They fenced the property, installed an automatic watering system, and built a barn.

Their children impressed me as we viewed their herd by how easily they walked amongst their cattle, just as if they had been around their cattle their entire lives. Bill told us he investigated several beef breeds before selecting the Belted Galloway. He liked the breed because of its docile nature, medium frame score, and its foraging ability.

Along with assembling a nice herd of cattle, Bill researches the best forages for his animals. May-Lyn says, "Bill stays up late on his computer investigating the best grasses and legumes for the soils in our Maryland climate." He has also taken classes in nutrient management. The Adams family has plans to grow their current herd of 21 animals. They recently purchased another 143 acres for hay production and eventual grazing.

The family is now converting part of their barn into a small retail store to offer their beef to local residents. Sylvia and I reflected on how we began our retail business 10 years ago and how exciting it is to see the Adams' pursuing the same venture. With their drive and determination, the family is certainly on the road to success.

Please visit www.beltie.org and support our youth by purchasing a copy of the 2014 breeding calendar "Kids with their Cows." Your donation will support funding for programs for kids like the Adams family and the entire Belted Galloway Junior Association.

Two-month limit on classified insertions. Please include contact information — name, farm, location, phone, fax and email, if any. For all emails — place Hotline in the subject line. Please Email to executivedirector@beltie.org, Fax 608-527-4811 or phone (608) 220-1091. We encourage members to submit ads the last two weeks of the month. Advertising bulls ... Before advertising a young male as a breeder we must be sure he is well conformed, tracks properly, has good legs and feet, and exhibits good weight gains. We should have data available on his birth weight, 205-day weaning weight, and yearling weight. If he's reached breeding age (around 18 months), it's definitely a plus to have his semen checked for quantity and motility.

Western Belted Galloway Association

The Western Belted Galloway Association held their annual meeting during October in Reno, Nevada. Members from thirteen farms/ranches attended the meeting. A Friday evening mixer provided those attending a chance to socialize.

Steve Foster from the Nevada Cooperative Extension Service gave a presentation discussing live cattle evaluation, yield and quality grades, marbling, ribeye adjustments, and the final valuation price of beef sold. Members broke into groups and selected a steer from a set of photos. They estimated how the animal would grade, yield, and price at slaughter.

The WBGA awarded three youth sponsorships in 2013. Haley Sellers and Faith Osborn of California showed their Belties in their state. Angie Patton of Washington State, showed her cattle at the Eastern Idaho State Fair and also won the Best Educational and Best Display contest. Her display was also sponsored by the WBGA.

An election of WBGA officers for the next two-year term was conducted. The new officers elected for the term beginning January 2014 are: President, Mac McConnell (OR); Vice President, Kevin Osborn (CA); and Secretary/Treasurer, Ken Bajema (WA).

Outgoing president Ken Bajema (WA) thanked Gerald Anderson (UT), Mac McConnell (OR) and Charlyn Witcher (OR) for their assistance and hard work in making the WBGA successful and for growing the organization.

The WBGA welcomes all Belted Galloway breeders to join their regional organization. To join, complete their registration application which can be found at www.beltedgalloway.org/join.html. Follow their instructions for payment on that page or contact Mac McConnell (541) 875-1519. The group also produces the Beltline newsletter.

Pennsylvania — The Keystone State

President Jon Bednarski

A relatively new member to our breed is Ellen Sims of HC Sims Farms, from the rural Washington County in western Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania currently has 469 registered/recorded Belted Galloway cattle and 55 member farms.

Ellen entered the breed when she purchased her first Belted Galloway, a bull named Meadowood Xman, at the 2011 North American Livestock Show in Louisville, KY. When I asked Ellen why she would purchase a champion bull when she had no Beltie females to breed, she answered, "You need to start with a breeding bull of solid foundation before you can build a great herd."

Ellen retired from teaching after 35 years, but her ties to farming in Pennsylvania go deep into her childhood. Her father, H.C. Sims, who was in the lumber and coal industry, started building their farm in 1934, a farm that now encompasses a beautiful, productive valley just off I-79 between Morgantown, West Virginia and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. As a young child, Ellen remembers feeding their black Angus cattle and helping during the calving season on the farm. When her father passed away, Ellen was 21 years of age and was just beginning her career in teaching. The family maintained the herd for seven years after he died, but with careers off the farm and changes in the cattle industry, they decided to sell the remaining animals.

When Ellen retired from teaching several years ago, her fond memories of the farm sparked her interest and passion for returning the farm to production. Her nephew, Clark Sims has a long-established Sim-Angus herd of cattle and she works with him to manage her purebred Belted Galloway cattle at the farm in PA. Ellen thought out which breed she was going to become vested in, and was instantly drawn to the deep history, unique look, and the low maintenance requirements of the Belties.

The challenges of upgrading the fences to incorporate a rotational grazing system plus modernizing the barns on the long-idle family farm are keeping Ellen and Clark busy. However, the work is paying off and the farm is quickly returning to the functional spectacle it once was. Ellen was attracted to the milder winters in Kentucky and has recently acquired a farm just south of Lexington. Kaye Weaber and Jeff Kaufman develop her show cattle, manage her A.I. program, and prepare her show and sale animals. Another appeal to the Kentucky location is its proximity to several major shows and a market area. Often, Ellen will make the trip between the two farms accompanied by her nephew Jack Gaido, who also has developed an attraction to the Belties.

What's ahead for Ellen Sims? Like most of Ellen's ventures, her plans for the farms have been extensively thought out and they will be run as businesses. After speaking with Ellen, it is evident that she only does things that she enjoys, and as long as she continues to enjoy the breed and the business, she will continue to build her breeding herd one quality purchase at a time. Her first Xman calves are on the ground and the future looks bright. It is her hope to be at a solid 100 animals, and in the future, enter into the direct beef market and establish a recognizable brand.

In November, during the National Belted Galloway Show, Ellen will unveil a magnificent bronze trophy she commissioned by international artist James Sulkowski for the Grand Champion Bull award. This will be a traveling trophy that will honor both past and present winners at NAILE.

Ellen, welcome to the breed, we look forward to seeing your two farms grow!
