PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

President Jack Bagley

I hope Spring has arrived in whatever part of the country members live.... although there have been wild temperature swings, some within 24 hours.

I want to take this opportunity to personally extend best wishes and good health to our long time Executive Director, Vic Eggleston. I also want to personally welcome Greg Hipple as Executive Director and Corinna

Caron as Director of the newly established position of Breed Promotion and Member Outreach.

Both Greg and Corinna have been members of the Belted Galloway for many years, and have served in various capacities for Society and Regional activities. Please reach out to them, introduce yourself, and lend your support for the new team.

By the time you read this the Great Lakes Belted Galloway Association will likely have held their annual Field Day programs. The Society will also conduct a Council Meeting as part of the activities, and have an open forum for members to ask questions of Greg and other Council members present.

This Council meeting will also begin the planning for the Annual Meeting to be held in Louisville in November in conjunction with NAILE. There will not be a Sale as part of the Annual Meeting this year.

More on those activities in future issues of the newsletters and on the beltie.org website.

Stay well.

BGS LEADERSHIP UPDATES

Greg Hipple, BGS Executive Director

The Executive Director duties officially changed over on May 16th between Vic and myself.

I appreciate everyone's patience and understanding as we negotiate this surprisingly challenging transition.

For a time, due to the current systems that are used, both Vic and I will be dealing with some members needs, and we want the membership to know about that.

Work initiated at Vic's office, (DNA testing for example) will be completed and handled by Vic, work submitted on or after May 16, 2022 will be handled at my office going forward. To all that have sent emails and phone calls of welcome, thank you.

Office Hours:

Effective May 15, 2022

Corinna Caron, BGS Director of Breed Promotion and Member Outreach

First of all, thank you to everyone that reached out with the kind words of congrats and encouragement as I started this new venture with BGS as the Director of Breed Promotion and Member Outreach. I am so excited to start work on some crucial parts to our Society that will help us be an even better organization and that in turn will be hugely beneficial for this breed that we love so much!

I will also be reaching out to Regional Groups and start inquiring about the Youth/Juniors programs that they have so that I can work with them to start a leadership group of youth from all over the country to help spearhead a stronger National Junior Program. If you do not belong to a regional group but want to be part of this program please reach out to me!

And although we are headed into summer most of us are already thinking about fall and the processing of cattle for customers. If you are interested in getting some of the Beltie Beef promotional cards (as seen here <https://beltie.org/belted-galloway-beef.php>) to help aid your selling of Beltie Beef please reach out to me and we will get that taken care of!

While I do not have any set times for office hours please know that you can call me and leave a message or send an email at any time and I will get back to you as quickly as I can! I look forward to helping our members any way I can.

FREEZER BEEF BREAKDOWN 101

Many Belted Galloway owners market their animals as freezer beef for their friends, families and local communities. This is a great way to generate a revenue for your farm but explaining what your customers can expect to receive in their freezer can be difficult. The below article was updated in 2020 and was published by South Dakota State University Extension to help beef producers explain the process of going from live animal weight to pounds of beef. Use this information to share with fellow beef producers or to help explain the process to your beef customers.

The yield of edible meat from a beef carcass often comes as a bit of a surprise, even to those that have had their own meat processed for years. Dressing percent is the percent of the live animal weight that becomes carcass weight, which for fed beef is usually around 62-64%. In other words, from a 1200 pound steer, you can expect a 740 – 770 pound carcass. But, from that carcass there is another significant portion that will not end up in your freezer or in the meat case for consumers.

The expected yield of retail cuts from beef carcasses ranges from approximately 55% to 75%, depending on the fatness and muscling of the animal, and the type of cuts produced. A typical 750 carcass with ½ inch of fat over the rib eye and average muscling of a 12-13 square inch rib eye will yield about 65% of the carcass weight as retail cuts (roasts and steaks) and lean trim. So, in other words, you start with a 1200 pound steer, which has a dressing percent of 63%, so that you have a 750 pound carcass. From that you will get about 65% of the carcass weight, or roughly 490 pounds, as boneless, trimmed beef. If you look at that as a percentage of the live weight of the steer you started with, it is approximately 40% of the live weight.

Remaining components of the weight are fat trim and bone. Fat can be highly variable, but in the example used, fat would account for approximately 20% of the carcass weight or 12% of the live weight. Bone accounts for the other 15% of carcass weight. Recognize that these are average figures! These can vary considerably due to the fat and lean composition of the animal, as well as the trim level and methods of cutting the meat. However, it does demonstrate that it is a relatively small percentage of the live animal that ends up in the retail meat case as high quality edible meat. This is one factor that helps explain the difference between price per pound of a live animal and price per pound of retail beef.

If you look further at specific cuts of beef, it becomes even more apparent why some cuts are significantly higher priced in the retail meat case. Again using the example above, and cutting the carcass into primarily boneless steaks and roasts, the highest percentage of carcass weight, or 20-25%, actually ends up as lean trim.

This 150 -185 pounds of lean trim would likely be packaged as ground beef. The next highest percentages would come from the chuck and round portions of the carcass. Boneless chuck roasts and steaks would typically account for 10-12% of carcass weight. Round roasts and steaks, including top round, eye of round, knuckle or sirloin tip, and bottom round would account for another 10-12%. However, it is when we look at the “middle meats”, those from the loin and rib, that the percentages are much less. Using a primarily boneless cutting method, you could take home strip loin, tenderloin, sirloin and rib eye steaks. All together, these steaks may add up to 10-12 % of carcass weight. But if you look at individual types of steaks, each one would be less than 3%, with tenderloins even less, at about 1.5% or less of carcass weight. What does that translate to? With a yield of 2.5% for strip loin steaks, that would be 18 pounds of strip steaks. For tenderloin steaks, or filets, a yield of 1.25% would give us 9 pounds of tenderloin steaks. Ever had a great grilled tri-tip? You'll only get two tri-tip roasts, each weighing about 1 ½ pounds from that 750 pound carcass.

So, to summarize: A 1200 steer, ½ inch fat, average muscling, yields a 750 pound carcass. The 750 pound carcass yields approximately:

490 pounds boneless trimmed beef
150 pounds fat trim
110 pounds bone

A specific example of how the 490 pounds of boneless, trimmed beef could break out includes:

185 pounds lean trim, or ground beef
85 pounds round roasts and steaks
90 pounds chuck roasts and steaks
80 pounds rib and loin steaks
50 pounds other cuts (brisket, flank, short ribs, skirt steak)

Maybe this helps explain how the products from a 1200 pound steer to fit in your freezer!

Jayde, here!

My first job out of college was working for the Beef Checkoff Program in Wisconsin. I would encourage all beef producers to lean into this program and utilize the resources they have to help educate and market your product to your freezer beef customers.

While Belted Galloway beef may have some unique and specific meat qualities, your Beef Checkoff Program will have general beef information for your usage. This, combined with the information that is available to you through the Belted Galloway Society will provide a great foundation for you to build your talking points and clientele.
